1. The City of Scranton

Scranton trail sections include the Downtown Scranton Riverwalk, the CNJ Extension, and the Levee Trail.

The Scranton Half Marathon Pavilion at the Olive Street Riverwalk is a landmark of the Downtown Scranton Riverwalk (accessed via Olive Street or 7th Avenue). The Riverwalk is close to the historic district around Courthouse Square, shopping, dining, arts and cultural venues, colleges and universities, historic sites, parks and recreational centers, and its paths are abundant in nature and wildlife.

The Central New Jersey (CNJ) Extension is named after the Central New Jersey Railroad that once ran along its path. Access this section via Elm Street or Broadway Street. Running from South Scranton to Taylor, the trail features rock carvings of wildlife, a sculpture of a Haudenosaunee chief, and an amphitheater with stones representing the Six Iroquois Nations paying homage to the area’s Native American heritage.

The Levee Trail (accessed via the Nay Aug Avenue Trailhead) runs atop a portion of the city’s flood control levee. From collieries to textile mills and some of the city’s oldest neighborhoods, this section offers interesting perspective of historic Scranton.
